

Fathammer Launches Eight New Mobile Games

(March 10,2005) Fathammer, a leading developer of advanced mobile game technologies and award winning high quality games, announced today that it will launch eight new advanced mobile games on several platforms this spring. Another eight games will be launched later this year.

"The demand for 3D mobile games has grown substantially and this is where our experience and expertise is. Having developed technology and games for the very high end of the market, we have learned how to maximize the performance of the device to give users the console quality gaming experience," says Matti Airas, CEO of Fathammer. More in Press Releases.